

Gary Blattenbauer

Boeing Commercial Airplanes

Gary Blattenbauer is presently a Boeing Commercial Airplanes, Senior Manager of Global Logistics on the 787 Program. In this role, Gary is responsible for establishing and leading the air cargo logistics that support the 787 Global supply chain. Based in Charleston, SC he leads a team with offices in Charleston, SC and in Everett, Washington that will enable the 747 Large Cargo Aircraft -The Dreamlifter - to support the 787 Production System. This includes working with Evergreen International Aviation, our Dreamlifter operating partner, to setup 5 cargo stations around the globe at our 787 Partner sites.

Prior to joining the 787 Program Gary was a participant in the Boeing Executive Development Program (EDP), leading and supporting company wide projects. EDP project participation included country strategy development, export/import control, and asset utilization. During his career he has lead a wide range of activities in Manufacturing Operations through his assignments primarily within the Boeing Commercial Airplanes. The range of activities managed covers areas from Supply Chain Design, Raw Material/Component Procurement, Manufacturing Engineering, Requirements Management, to Business Management. Gary received his MBA from Seattle University.

Gary, his wife Susan, and twin 12-month old daughters Sara and Sophia make their home in Mt. Pleasant, South Carolina.